NEW QUESTION: 2Your newly appointed Cisco trainee wants to know how IPv6 manages to achieve subnetting.What will your reply be?A. Subnetting is not permitted in IPv6B. Subnetworks are assigned by Public Authorities such as Internet Service ProvidersC. All of the aboveD. Site Level Aggregator in IPv6 addressesE. IPv4 compatible IPv6 addressesAnswer: DExplanation:The aggregatable global address typically consists of a 48-bit global routing prefix and a 16-bit subnet ID or Site-Level Aggregator (SLA). In the IPv6 aggregatable global unicast address format document (RFC 2374), the global routing prefix included two other hierarchically structured fields named Top-Level Aggregator (TLA) and Next-Level Aggregator (NLA).The IETF decided to remove the TLA and NLA fields from the RFCs because these fields are policy-based. Some existing IPv6 networks deployed before the change might still be using networks based on the older architecture.A 16-bit subnet field called the Subnet ID could be used by individual organizations to create their own local addressing hierarchy and to identify subnets. A subnet ID is similar to a subnet in IPv4, except that an organization with an IPv6 subnet ID can support up to 65,535 individual subnets.Reference: Implementing IPv6 for Cisco IOS Software Page 22
