NEW QUESTION: 1 Of the seven types of Access Control Categories, which is described as such? Designed to specify rules of acceptable behavior in the organization. Example: Policy stating that employees may not spend time on social media websites
A. Directive Access Control
B. Preventive Access Control
C. Deterrent Access Control
D. Detective Access Control
Answer: A
Explanation: There are seven access control categories. Below you have the Access Control Types and Categories.
-Access Control Types:-Administrative-Policies, data classification and labeling and security awareness training-Technical-Hardware - MAC Filtering or perimeter devices like-Software controls like account logons and encryption, file perms-Physical-Guard, fences and locks-Access Control Categories: Directive: specify rules of acceptable behavior -Policy stating users may not use facebook
Deterrent:-Designed to discourage people from violating security directives-Logon banner reminding users about being subject to monitoring
Preventive:-Implemented to prevent a security incident or information breach-Like a fence or file permissions
Detective:-Used to mitigate the loss.-Example: Logging, IDS with a Firewall
Compensating:-To substitute for the loss of a primary control or add additional mitigation -Example: Logging, IDS inline with firewall
Corrective:-To remedy circumstance, mitigate damage or restore control-Example: Fire extinguisher, firing an employee
Recovery:-To restore conditions to normal after a security incident-Restore files from backup
All these are designed to shape employee behavior to better maintain an environment that supports the business objectives and protects corporate assets. The following answers are incorrect:-Deterrent Access Control: This is not right because a deterrent access control discourages people from violating security directives.-Preventive Access Control: This is incorrect because a preventive access control category is used to simply stop or block unwanted behavior. Users don't have a choice about whether to violate the behavior rules.-Detective Access Control: Sorry, this isn't an access control category.
