NEW QUESTION: 1A. Option BB. Option A*C. Option D*D. Option C*Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2You are designing an application by using Windows Presentation Foundation (WPF) and Microsoft .NET Framework 4. The application retrieves customer data from an enterprise resource planning (ERP) system.You need to ensure that the following requirements are met:What should you do?A. Store the results of the query in a static DataTable object that is used by all the forms.B. Store the results of the query in a local XML file. Bind all forms to an XMLDataAdapter object that references the local XML file.C. Design a static class for the data that implements the [Observable interface. Subscribe to the static class from each of the forms that use the data.D. Design a static class for the data that implements the INotifyPropertyChanged interface. Raise the PropertyChanged event to notify the forms when data is changed.Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3Suppose you are a domain administrator and are choosing an employee to carry out backups. Which access control method do you think would be best for this scenario?A. RBAC - Rule-Based Access ControlB. DAC - Discretionary Access ControlC. MAC - Mandatory Access ControlD. RBAC - Role-Based Access ControlAnswer: D*Explanation:RBAC - Role-Based Access Control permissions would fit best for a backup job for the employee because the permissions correlate tightly with permissions granted to a backup operator.A role-based access control (RBAC) model, bases the access control authorizations on the roles (or functions) that the user is assigned within an organization. The determination of what roles have access to a resource can be governed by the owner of the data, as with DACs, or applied based on policy, as with MACs. Access control decisions are based on job function, previously defined and governed by policy, and each role (job function) will have its own access capabilities. Objects associated with a role will inherit privileges assigned to that role. This is also true for groups of users, allowing administrators to simplify access control strategies by assigning users to groups and groups to roles.Specifically, in the Microsoft Windows world there is a security group called "BackupOperators" in which you can place the users to carry out the duties. This way you could assign the backup privilege without the need to grant the Restore privilege. This would prevent errors or a malicious person from overwriting the current data with an old copy for example.The following answers are incorrect:- MAC - Mandatory

Access Control: This isn't the right answer. The role of Backup administrator fits perfectly with the access control Role-Based access control.- DAC - Discretionary Access Control: This isn't the correct answer because DAC relies on data owner/creators to determine who has access to information.- RBAC - Rule-Based Access Control: If you got this wrong it may be because you didn't read past the RBAC part. Be very careful to read the entire question and answers before proceeding.
