NEW QUESTION: 1You've decided to authenticate the source who initiated a particular transfer while ensuring integrity of the data being transferred. You can do this by:A. Having the sender encrypt the hash with his public key.B. Having the sender encrypt the message with his private key.C. Having the sender encrypt the hash with his private key.D. Having the sender encrypt the message with his symmetric key.Answer: CExplanation:Instead of using a shared-key to encrypt the hash of a given message, the sender's private key is used to encrypt the hash value of the message. This is the act of digitally signing the message.Digital Signatures provide authentication of a sender and integrity of a sender's message.A message is input into a hash function. Then the hash value is encrypted using the private key of the sender. The result of these two steps yields a digital signature. The receiver can verify the digital signature by decrypting the hash value using the signer's public key, then perform the same hash computation over the message, and then compare the hash values for an exact match. If the hash values are the same then the signature is valid.The following answers are incorrect:Having the sender encrypt the hash with his public key. This does not provide any benefit because only the sender cold decrypt using his own private key and nobody else.Encrypting with a publick key only provide Confidentiality and not other service.Having the sender encrypt the message with his private key. This is close but not good enough. It would only provide authenticity of the source.Having the sender encrypt the message with his symmetric key. This would provide only Confidentiality.The following reference(s) were/was used to create this question:Hernandez CISSP, Steven (2012-12-21).
