NEW QUESTION: 1 Which one of the following is true about the difference between the Action List builder and the Method builder?
A. The Method builder conveniently allows the user to drag and drop programming language constructs from the palette, which are converted into Java code. The palette cannot be used with the Action List builder.
B. The Action List builder allows if/else conditionals, but does not support adding looping constructs such as "for" loops and "while" loops. The Method builder allows the user to add looping logic.
C. The Action List builder is recommended over the Method builder. In addition to using the chooser to make a variable assignment or execute a service call, the Action List builder supports using the picker to add programming constructs to the Action List, including conditionals and looping.
D. The Method builder can return a value, but the Action List builder cannot.
Answer: B
