NEW QUESTION: 3 You want to run an app install campaign for one of your clients. They would like to reach out to new audiences, but don't want to pay more than $9 per app install registered through the campaign. They have a specific budget, so the cost per install can't pass a maximum price. Which bidding strategy should you optimize for? Choose only ONE best answer. A. The campaign should run under the "Lowest Cost" bidding option with a Maximum-Cost ceiling of $9 in order to maintain the clients per app install costs. B. There is no way in setting a $9 average cost within Facebook for app installs. You can only use it with product catalog sales campaigns. C. The campaign should run with a Target Cost bidding strategy since you want to maximize the efficiency of your budget. D. The campaign should run under the "Target Cost" bidding strategy since you want to stabilize the cost per install at $9.

Answer: A Explanation: Explanation Bidding strategies help you control the overall spent with budget constraints. There are basically two bidding options: Lowest Cost or Target Cost

1. Lowest Cost The lowest cost bidding strategy tells Facebook to get the lowest possible cost per result, while also spending your entire budget.
2. Target Cost The target cost bidding strategy tells Facebook to get as close as possible to your cost target. This option is only available for app installs, conversions, and catalog sales marketing objectives. In this case you need to have a "Lowest Cost" strategy as you want to achieve the following:
 - Limit the app install at $9.00- You know you can't afford a higher cost of $9.00 as it won't be profitable for your clientKeep in mind that lowest cost budget will achieve your costs results but might not get you results as you might be bidding lower than the auction requires for your ad to be competitive. You should start with lowest costs and then could potentially move to target cost once you've achieved at least 50-75 app installs and you have a better understanding of real costs for your client. You should also move to target costs if you are not getting enough app install results with your first campaign.

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which three statements about project specific picking process are correct?
