NEW QUESTION: 1The Moore Corporation is considering the acquisition of a new machine. The machine can be purchased for $90,000; it will cost $6,000 to transport to Moore's plant and $9,000 to install. It is estimated that the machine will last 10 years, and it is expected to have an estimated salvage value of $5,000. Over its 10-year life, the machine is expected to produce 2,000 units per year with a selling price of $500 and combined material and labor costs of $450 per unit. Federal tax regulations permit machines of this type to be depreciated using the straight-line method over 5 years with no estimated salvage value. Moore has a marginal tax rate of 40 percent. What is the net cash flow for the tenth year of the project that Moore Corporation should use in a capital budgeting analysis? A. $68,400 B. $63,000 C. $60,000 D. $81,000 Answer: B Explanation: Choice "c" is correct. $63,000 net cash flow for the tenth year. Alternate Computation: In year 10, Moore will generate a $100,000 profit from the incremental sales (2000 units * ($500 - $450)). This profit will be taxed at 40%, so the net after-tax increase in cash flow is $60,000. The machine is fully depreciated in year 10 because it was depreciated over a 5-year life. The tax basis of the machine is zero on the date Moore receives a $5,000 salvage value for the machine. The gain on the machine of $5,000 ($5,000 SV $0 Basis) is taxed at 40%, or $2,000 in total tax outflow for the gain, so the net inflows on the salvage is $3,000. Therefore, the total after-tax cash flows in year 10 for the new machine is $60,000 + $3,000 = $63,000.
