NEW QUESTION: 1 DRAG DROP Answer: Explanation:

NEW QUESTION: 2 A university has a building that holds the power generators for the entire campus. A risk assessment was completed for the university and the generator building was labeled as a high risk. Fencing and lighting was installed to reduce risk. Which of the following security goals would this meet? A. Non-repudiation B. Disaster recovery C. Load balancing D. Physical security Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which of the following is defined as the most recent point in time to which data must be synchronized without adversely affecting the organization (financial or operational impacts)? A. Recovery Time Objective B. Point of Time Objective C. Critical Time Objective D. Recovery Point Objective Answer: D Explanation: Explanation/Reference: The recovery point objective (RPO) is the maximum acceptable level of data loss following an unplanned "event", like a disaster (natural or man-made), act of crime or terrorism, or any other business or technical disruption that could cause such data loss. The RPO represents the point in time, prior to such an event or incident, to which lost data can be recovered (given the most recent backup copy of the data). The recovery time objective (RTO) is a period of time within which business and / or technology capabilities must be restored following an unplanned event or disaster. The RTO is a function of the extent to which the interruption disrupts normal operations and the amount of revenue lost per unit of time as a result of the disaster. These factors in turn depend on the affected equipment and application(s). Both of these numbers represent key targets that are set by key businesses during business continuity and disaster recovery planning; these targets in turn drive the technology and implementation choices for business resumption services, backup / recovery / archival services, and recovery facilities and procedures. Many organizations put the cart before the horse in selecting and deploying technologies before understanding the business needs as expressed in RPO and RTO; IT departments later bear the brunt of user complaints that their service expectations are not being met. Defining the RPO and RTO can avoid that pitfall, and in doing so can also make for a compelling business case for recovery technology spending and staffing. For the CISSP candidate studying for the exam, there are no such objectives for "point of time," and "critical time." Those two answers are simply detractors.
