NEW QUESTION: 1 Refer to the following partial output of the debug standby command on an HSRP-enabled router rtrA:Which of the following information CANNOT be gathered from the given partial output?A. IP address of the virtual routerB. Priority of the active routerC. The tracked interfacesD. IP address of the current active routerAnswer: CExplanation: Explanation/Reference:Explanation:The debug standby command does not provide any information about the tracked HSRP interfaces. This command displays information regarding the changes in the state of the HSRP routers and packet transmissions between the routers. Some of the information that you can view using the debug standby command is as follows:IP address of the virtual routerIP address of the current active routerPriority of the active router Hello timer valuesHold time valuesState of the routerInterface used to exchange HSRP packets HSRP packets contain the IP address of the virtual router. The IP address preceded by the text ip in the debug standby output is the address of the virtual router. In this case, the packets contain 10.5.5.5 after the text ip. This implies that 10.5.5.5 is the IP address of the virtual router. After HSRP selects the active and standby routers for a group, only the active and standby routers send HSRP packets to the virtual router. If the active router fails, the standby router becomes the active router.The text Hello in and the text Hello out indicate the hello packets received from and sent to the given IP address. Initially the router with IP address 10.5.5.1 is the active router, as indicated by the text Active router is 10.5.5.1.The priority of the active router is 100, which is indicated by the text pri 100. However, when a hello packet from 10.5.5.2 is received, which has a higher priority (120) than the active router, the 10.5.5.2 router automatically and instantly becomes the active router. This implies that the router with the IP address10.5.5.2 was the standby router and the standby preempt command was executed. NEW QUESTION: 2 Your network consists of one Active Directory domain. The domain contains servers that run Windows Server 2008. The servers are configured as shown in the following table. (Click the Exhibit) All client computers run Windows Vista Service Pack 1 (SP1).Remote domain users at a customer site report that they can access Server2 from the Internet by using the URL https://portal.contoso.com. They also report that a firewall at the customer site prevents all other outbound connections.You need to implement a solution to enable remote users to access files on Server3 from a VPN connection.Which connection should you enable on

Server1?A. Secure Socket Tunneling Protocol (SSTP)B. PPTPC. IPsec tunnel modeD. L2TP
Answer: A Explanation:To plan a solution that would allow the remote users using firewall on their remote locations to access fileson Server3 through a VPN connection, you need to configure Secure Socket Tunneling Protocol (SSTP)connection.Before Windows Server 2008, all kinds of VPN connections such as PPTP L2TP, and IPSec had problemswith firewalls, NATs, and Web proxies. To prevent problems, firewalls must be configured to allowconnections. If your VPN client computer is behind a NAT, both the VPN client can't beand the VPN server must support IPsec NAT-Traversal (NAT-T). Besides, VPN server can't flow through aWeb proxy. located behind a NAT, and that L2TP/IPsec trafficWith the advent of SSTP in Windows Server 2008 all the VPN connectivity problems such as firewalls,NATs, and Web proxies are solved. The SSTP connection allows the use of HTTP oversecure sockets layer (SSL). SSTP uses an HTTP-over-SSL session between VPN clients and servers toexchange encapsulated IPv4 or IPv6 packets.Reference: The Cable Guy: The Secure Socket Tunneling Protocol / The New VPN Solutionhttp://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/magazine/cc162322.aspx
