NEW QUESTION: 3 A cloud solution is being planned using the IBM Storwize family to provide storage for multiple clients on IBM Power and Intel hosts. Which solution provides the necessary storage for the primary site and a disaster recovery location at a data center 1500 kilometers away?
A. Create volumes on IBM Storwize V7000 storage at the primary data center and use Global Mirror to create copies on an IBM Storwize V7000 at the disaster recovery location.
B. Create volume mirrors on IBM Storwize V7000 storage at the primary data center with virtualized external IBM Storwize V3700 storage at the disaster recovery location.
C. Create a four node IBM Storwize V7000 cluster with one I/O Group at the primary data center and the other at the disaster recovery location. Use FlashCopy to copy the volumes from the primary I/O Group to the disaster recovery I/O Group.
D. Create volumes on IBM Storwize V7000 Storage at the primary data center and use Metro to create asynchronous copies on an IBM Storwize V5030 at the disaster recovery location.
Answer: A
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Metro Mirror and Global Mirror are technologies that enable you to keep a real-time copy of a disk at a remote site that contains another SVC Cluster or Storwize V7000 system.
Incorrect Answers: A: FlashCopy is a function that allows you to create a point-in-time copy of one of your SVC disks. This might be helpful when performing backups or application testing. These copies may be cascaded upon one another, read from, written to, and even reversed. These copies are able to conserve storage, if needed, by being space-efficient copies that only record items that have changed from the originals instead of full copies.
C: Volume Mirroring is a function designed to increase high availability of the storage infrastructure. It provides the ability to create up to two local copies of a volume. References: IBM System Storage SAN Volume Controller and Storwize V7000 Replication Family Services, page 22
