NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following would be MOST important to guarantee that the computer evidence will be admissible in court? A. Its reliability must be proven. B. The process for producing it must be documented and repeatable. C. It must prove a fact that is immaterial to the case. D. The chain of custody of the evidence must show who collected, secured, controlled, handled, transported the evidence, and that it was not tampered with. Answer: D
Explanation: It has to be material, relevant and reliable, and the chain of custody must be maintained, it is unlikely that it will be admissible in court if it has been tampered with. The following answers are incorrect: It must prove a fact that is immaterial to the case. Is incorrect because evidence must be relevant. If it is immaterial then it is not relevant. Its reliability must be proven. Is incorrect because it is not the best answer. While evidence must be relevant if the chain of custody cannot be verified, then the evidence could lose its credibility because there is no proof that the evidence was not tampered with. So, the correct answer above is the BEST answer. The process for producing it must be documented and repeatable. Is incorrect because just because the process is documented and repeatable does not mean that it will be the same. This amounts to Corroborative Evidence that may help to support a case.
