NEW QUESTION: 3A customer has an HP ProVision switch capable of Layer 3 forwarding: however, Layer 3 forwarding is disabled. The switch has an IP address in the management VLAN, where the default gateway is 10.1.1.1, which ProVision command should the network administrator use so the ProVision switch can access the Intelligent Management Center (IMC) server in a different VLAN?A. IP route 0.0.0.0.0.0.0.0 10.1.1.1B. IP default-gateway 10.1.1.1C. Default-route 10.1.1.1D. IP route 0.0.0.0 255.255.255.255 10.1.1.1Answer: AExplanation:A default route is a special static route that applies to all traffic. Typically, when the router receives a packet that it does not know how to forward, it drops it. A default route allows the router to forward all such packets toward the destination most likely to be able to route them. To configure a default route, enter a route to a destination address of all zeros with an all-zero subnet mask. The all-zero subnet mask indicates to the router that a packet's IP address does not have to match any of the destination address bits in order for the route to be valid. Because the router always matches traffic to the most specific route, it will only use the default route for traffic that would otherwise be dropped.To configure the default route, move to the global configuration mode context and enter this command:Syntax: ip route 0.0.0.0 [0.0.0.0 | /0] <next hop A.B.C.D | forwarding interface ID>[<administrative distance>]The ProCurve Secure Router allows you to enter the default route in CIDR notation.Reference: ftp://ftp.hp.com/pub/networking/software/B-C11-Routing.pdf

NEW QUESTION: 4HOTSPOTAnswer: Explanation:Explanation:Lets the system run startup scripts simultaneously rather than waiting for each to finishhttp: //technet. microsoft. com/en-us/library/cc939423. aspxDirects the system to wait for logon scripts to finish running before it starts the Windows Explorer interface program and creates the desktop.If you enable this policy, Windows Explorer does not start until the logon scripts have finished running. This setting assures that logon script processing is complete before the user starts working, but it can delay the appearance of the desktop.If you disable this policy or do not configure it, the logon scripts and Windows Explorer are not synchronized and can run simultaneously.This policy appears in the Computer Configuration and User Configuration folders. The policy set in Computer Configuration takes precedence over the policy set in User Configuration.By default, the Fast Logon Optimization feature is set for both domain and workgroup members. This setting causes policy to be applied asynchronously when the computer starts and the user logs on. The result is similar to a background refresh. The advantage is that it can reduce the amount of time it takes for the logon dialog box to appear and the amount of time it takes for the desktop to become available to the user. Of course, it also means that the user may log on and start working before the absolute latest policy settings have been applied to the system. Depending on your environment, you may want to disable Fast Logon Optimization. You can do this with Group Policy, using the Always wait for the network at computer startup and logon policy setting.Refernces:http: //technet. microsoft. com/en-us/magazine/gg486839. aspxhttp: //technet. microsoft. com/en-us/magazine/gg486839. aspxhttp: //technet. microsoft. com/en-us/library/cc958585. aspx
