NEW QUESTION: 2Which of the following would be the BEST defense against sniffing? A. Encrypt the data being transmitted B. Implement a dynamic IP address scheme C. Set static mandatory access control (MAC) addresses D. Password protect the files Answer: A Explanation: Encrypting the data will obfuscate the data so that they are not visible in plain text. Someone would have to collate the entire data stream and try decrypting it, which is not easy. Passwords can be recovered by brute-force attacks and by password crackers, so this is not the best defense against sniffing. IP addresses can always be discovered, even if dynamic IP addresses are implemented. The person sniffing traffic can initiate multiple sessions for possible IP addresses. Setting static mandatory access control (MAC) addresses can prevent address resolution protocol (ARP) poisoning, but it does not prevent sniffing.

NEW QUESTION: 3A. Option BB. Option DC. Option ED. Option CE. Option AAAnswer: B,E
Explanation: To prevent VLAN hopping you should disable unused ports and put them in an unused VLAN, or a separate unrouted VLAN. By not granting connectivity or by placing a device into a VLAN not in use, unauthorized access can be thwarted through fundamental physical and logical barriers. Another method used to prevent VLAN hopping is to prevent automatic trunk configuration. Hackers used 802.1Q and ISL tagging attacks, which are malicious schemes that allow a user on a VLAN to get unauthorized access to another VLAN. For example, if a switch port were configured as DTP auto and were to receive a fake DTP packet, it might become a trunk port and it might start accepting traffic destined for any VLAN. Therefore, a malicious user could start communicating with other VLANs through that compromised port. Reference: VLAN Security White Paper, Cisco Systems
