Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2You are designing a VMware HA cluster. Due to project requirements, it has been agreed that the admission control policy is based on the number of host failures tolerated per cluster. However, because there are a number of small web servers and one large database server with large reservations, the slot size has been manually configured. What is the impact of this configuration?A. DPM cannot be used in this configuration.B. DRS will not automatically defragment the resources in the event of a failure.C. DRS will automatically defragment the resources in the event of a failure.Answer: BExplanation:With the rebuild of vSphere 5 HA functionality, it is possible for VMware HA to ask DRS to defragment a cluster if systems are not going to restart correctly. However, this functionality is disabled if the default or automatic slot size calculation is changed using the override setting. In situations like this, from a design perspective, a percentage-based admission control policy would be more beneficial. Chapter 4, The Importance of vMotion, VMware HA, and Fault Tolerance

NEW QUESTION: 3Your company uses Azure DevOps. Only users who have accounts in Azure Active Directory can access the Azure DevOps environment. You need to ensure that only devices that are connected to the on-premises network can access the Azure DevOps environment. What should you do?
A. In Azure Active Directory, configure conditional access.
B. Assign the Stakeholder access level to all users.
C. In Azure DevOps, configure Security in Project Settings.
D. In Azure Active Directory, configure risky sign-ins.
Answer: A
Explanation: Conditional Access is a capability of Azure Active Directory. With Conditional Access, you can implement automated access control decisions for accessing your cloud apps that are based on conditions. Conditional Access policies are enforced after the first-factor authentication has been completed.
