NEW QUESTION: 1Your network consists of a single Active Directory domain.All domain controllers run Windows Server 2008 R2.You need to identify the Lightweight Directory Access Protocol (LDAP) clients that are using the largest amount of available CPU resources on a domain controller.What should you do?A. Run the Active Directory Diagnostics Data Collector Set. Review the Active Directory Diagnostics report.B. Run the LAN Diagnostics Data Collector Set. Review the LAN Diagnostics report.C. Review the Hardware Events log in the Event Viewer.D. Review performance data in Resource Monitor.Answer: AExplanation:
<http://servergeeks.wordpress.com/2012/12/31/active-directory-diagnostics/>Active Directory DiagnosticsPrior to Windows Server 2008, troubleshooting Active Directory performance issues often required the installation of SPA. SPA is helpful because the Active Directory data set collects performance data and it generates XML based diagnostic reports that make analyzing AD performance issues easier by identifying the IP addresses of the highest volume callers and the type of network traffic that is placing the most loads on the CPU.Download SPA tool:
<http://www.microsoft.com/en-us/download/details.aspx?id=15506>Now the same functionality has been built into Windows Server 2008 and Windows Server 2008 R2 and you don't have to install SPA anymore.This performance feature is located in the Server Manager snap-in under the Diagnostics node and when the Active Directory Domain Services Role is installed the Active Directory Diagnostics data collector set is automatically created under System as shown here. When you will check the properties of the collector you will notice that the data is stored under %systemdrive%\perflogs, only now it is under the ADDS folder and when a data collection is run it creates a new subfolder called YYYYMMDD-#### where YYYY = Year, MM = Month and DD=Day and #### starts with 0001 . Active Directory Diagnostics data collector set runs for a default of 5 minutes. This duration period cannot be modified for the built-in collector. However, the collection can be stopped manually by clicking the Stop button or from the command line.To start the data collector set, you just have to right click on Active Directory Diagnostics data collector set and select Start. Data will be stored at %systemdrive%\perflogs location. Once you've gathered your data, you will have these interesting and useful reports under Report section, to aid in your troubleshooting and server performance trending. NEW QUESTION: 2 Refer to the exhibit. A problem with network connectivity has been observed. It is suspected that the cable connected to switch port Fa0/9 on Switch1 is disconnected. What would be an effect of this cable being disconnected?

A. For less than a minute, Host B would not be able to access the server in VLAN9. Then normal network function would resume.
B. Communication between VLAN3 and the other VLANs would be disabled.
C. The transfer of files from Host B to the server in VLAN9 would be significantly slower.
D. Host B would not be able to access the server in VLAN9 until the cable is reconnected.
Answer: A
Explanation: Spanning-Tree Protocol (STP) is a Layer 2 protocol that utilizes a special-purpose algorithm to discover physical loops in a network and effect a logical loop-free topology. STP creates a loop-free tree structure consisting of leaves and branches that span the entire Layer 2 network. The actual mechanics of how bridges communicate and how the STP algorithm works will be discussed at length in the following topics. Note that the terms bridge and switch are used interchangeably when discussing STP. In addition, unless otherwise indicated, connections between switches are assumed to be trunks. STP keeps the port either in block or in forward states, when forward port disconnect then within the less than a minute blocked port comes into forward state so packets start to go through new forward port. The Spanning Tree Protocol (STP) would identify the best path as well as alternate path to reach in proper destination. In a redundant link, if the primary link fails then the secondary links will automatically start after few minutes. If port Fa0/9 became disconnected, then the packets would be re-routed automatically using the Router-Switch2- Switch3 path.

NEW QUESTION: 3 How to troubleshooting whether there is impact performance of failure hard disk in storage system (slow)?
A. on host side check LUN IO state under multipath
B. in storage debug mode, through the command of iostat -x -d 1 to check IO of storage system, the average service time of some disk (svctm) over a period of time is obviously more than other disk, %util is close to 100%, and other disk are free, can judge the hard disk performance
C. check the link state in host side and ISM storage interface
D. under CLI check RAID LUN state, whether if it is abnormal
