Which of the following disk spaces will he use to store this secret information? Each correct answer represents a complete solution. NEW QUESTION: 3 A planner is supposed to be able to submit data within a data form. What are all the possible causes for an end user not being able to enter data on a data form? Select all that apply. A. The form is set to Read Only. B. The user has read access to the members on the data form. C. The form contains summary-level members in a bottom up version. D. The planning unit is set to first pass. E. Another user owns the planning unit. Answer: A,B,C
Explanation: C, E: By assigning access to a data form, you control which users can change its design (for example, its layout and instructions) and input data. Users can select only members to which they have read or write access. Users can edit data forms only if they have access to at least one member of each secured dimension. For example, if users have read-only access to the Europe entity, the rows and columns on data forms that include the Europe entity are displayed as read-only. Users can change data only for members to which they have write access. D: For bottom-up versions, rows and columns with level 0 members allow data entry. Rows or columns set to a parent member are read-only. The point of view must also be set to the level 0 member to allow data entry on a bottom-up version. Target versions allow data entry in parent and children members. If you assign children to bottom-up versions, these versions display as read-only parents on data forms.
