NEW QUESTION: 4What does the following scattergram suggest?A. Sales revenue is inversely related to training costs.B. Training costs do not affect sales revenue.C. Several data points are incorrectly plotted.D. The training program is not effective.Answer: BExplanation:Internal auditors may use scatter diagrams to detect misstated data, relationships among variables, and unusual operating results. A scatter diagram is a graph of data points. When the points have a systematic relationship, the independent (x) variable and dependent (y) variable are likely to be correlated; i.e., the value of one variable is a predictor of the value of the other. However, the variables in this scattergram are clearly uncorrelated because training costs do not predict sales.
