NEW QUESTION: 3 You work in a company which is named Wiikigo Corp. The company uses SQL Server 2008. You are the administrator of the company database. Now you are in charge of a SQL Server 2008 instance. There is a database named Dworks in the instance. Now you get a report from users saying that DB1 meets deadlock problems. As the technical support, you have to capture the deadlock information to the SQL Server error log. What should you do?A. You should configure a SQL Profiler trace, and make it capture the deadlock graphsB. First you should set the appropriate trace flags as a startup parameter, and then restart the SQL Server instanceC. For the AdventureWorks database, enable Server AuditingD. You should configure the data collector and make it capture the deadlock graphsAnswer: B*Explanation: To identify a deadlock, you must first obtain log information. If you suspect a deadlock, you must gather information about the (SPIDs) and the resources that are involved in the deadlock. To do this, add the T1204 and the -T3605 startup parameters to SQL Server. The startup parameters will take effect when SQL Server is stopped and then re-started. The -T1204 startup parameter collects information about the process and the resources when the deadlock detection algorithm encounters a deadlock. The -T3605 startup parameter writes this information to the SQL Server error logs.
