NEW QUESTION: 1An IS auditor reviewing an organization that uses cross-training practices should assess the risk of:A. inadequate succession planning.B. a disruption of operations.C. one person knowing all parts of a system.D. dependency on a single person.Answer: C
Explanation:Cross-training is a process of training more than one individual to perform a specific job or procedure. This practice helps decrease the dependence on a single person and assists in succession planning. This provides for the backup of personnel in the event of an absence and, thereby, provides for the continuity of operations. However, in using this approach, it is prudent to have first assessed the risk of any person knowing all parts of a system and the related potential exposures. Cross-training reduces the risks addressed in choices A, B and D.

NEW QUESTION: 2An engineer is troubleshooting authentication settings on a WSA.Which command accomplishes this action?A. verifyconfigauthB. verifyauthC. testauthconfigD. testconfigauthAnswer: C
Explanation:Tests the authentication settings for a given authentication realm against the authentication servers defined in the realm. testauthconfig [-d level] [realm name] Running the command without any option causes the appliance to list the configured authentication realms from which you can make a selection.The debug flag (-d) controls the level of debug information. The levels can range between 0-10.If unspecified, the appliance uses a level of 0. With level 0, the command will return success or failure. If the test settings fail, the command will list the cause of the failure.
