E. Assign users, groups, and application rules using a delimited string of users, groups, or application roles.
27.2.1.2 Static, Dynamic, and Rule-Based Task Assignment
There are different methods for assigning users, groups, and application roles to tasks.
1. Assign tasks statically
You can assign users, groups, and application roles statically (or by browsing the identity service). The values can be either of the following:
A single user, group, or application role (for example, jstein, CentralLoanRegion, or ApproverRole).
A delimited string of users, groups, or application roles (for example, jstein, wfaulk, cdickens).
2. Assign tasks dynamically
You can assign users, groups, and application roles dynamically using XPath expressions. These expressions enable you to dynamically determine the task participants at runtime. For example, you may have a business requirement to create a dynamic list of task approvers specified in a payload variable. The XPath expression can resolve to zero or more XML nodes. Each node value can be either of the following: A single user, group, or application role A delimited string of users, groups, or application roles. The default delimiter for the assigned delimited string is a comma (,). 3. Assign tasks with business rules You can create the list of task participants with complex expressions. The result of using business rules is the same as using XPath expressions. Reference (http://docs.oracle.com/cd/E14571_01/integration.1111/e10224/bp_introhwf.htm)
