NEW QUESTION: 1You are developing an application that uses structured exception handling. The application includes a class named ExceptionLogger. The ExceptionLogger class implements a method named LogException by using the following code segment:
`public static void LogException(Exception ex)`
You have the following requirements: Log all exceptions by using the LogException() method of the ExceptionLogger class. Rethrow the original exception, including the entire exception stack. You need to meet the requirements. Which code segment should you use?
A. Option D B. Option B C. Option C D. Option A
Answer: D
Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Once an exception is thrown, part of the information it carries is the stack trace. The stack trace is a list of the method call hierarchy that starts with the method that throws the exception and ends with the method that catches the exception. If an exception is re-thrown by specifying the exception in the throw statement, the stack trace is restarted at the current method and the list of method calls between the original method that threw the exception and the current method is lost. To keep the original stack trace information with the exception, use the throw statement without specifying the exception.

Explanation: The Delphi technique is a forecasting or decision-making approach that attempts to avoid groupthink (the tendency of individuals to conform to what they perceive to be the consensus). The technique allows only written, anonymous communication among group members. Each member takes a position on the problem at hand. A summary of these positions is communicated to each member. The process is repeated for several iterations as the members move toward a consensus. Thus, the Delphi technique is a qualitative, not quantitative, technique. The College Honor Society sells hot pretzels at the home football games. The pretzels are sold for US $1.00 each, and the cost per pretzel is US $.30. Any unsold pretzels are discarded because they will be stale before the next home game. 95. The estimated demand for pretzel at the next home football game.
