NEW QUESTION: 1 The fossil remains of the first flying vertebrates, the pterosaurs, have intrigued paleontologists for morethan two centuries. How such large creatures, which weighed in some cases as much as a pilotedhangglider and had wingspans from 8 to 12 meters, solved the problems of powered flight, and exactlywhat these creatures were-reptiles or birds-are among the questions scientist have puzzled over.Perhaps the least controversial assertion about the pterosaurs is that they were reptiles. Their skulls,pelvises, and hind feet are reptilian. The anatomy of their wings suggests that they did not evolve into theclass of birds. In pterosaurs a greatly elongated fourth finger of each forelimb supported a wing likemembrane. The other fingers were short and reptilian, with sharp claws, in birds the second finger is the principle strut of the wing, which consists primarily of features. If the pterosaur walked or remainedstationary, the fourth finger, and with it the wing, could only turn upward in an extended inverted V-shapealong side of the animal's body.The pterosaurs resembled both birds and bats in their overall structure and proportions. This is notsurprising because the design of any flying vertebrate is subject to aerodynamic constraints. Both thepterosaurs and the birds have hollow bones, a feature that represents a saving in weight. In the birds,however, these bones are reinforced more massively by internal struts.Although scales typically cover reptiles, the pterosaurs probably had hairy coats. T.H. Huxley reasonedthat flying vertebrates must have been warm blooded because flying implies a high internal temperature.Huxley speculated that a coat of hair would insulate against loss of body heat and might streamline thebody to reduce drag in flight. The recent discovery of a pterosaur specimen covered in long, dense, andrelatively thick hairlike fossil material was the first clear evidenced that his reasoning was correct.Efforts to explain how the pterosaurs became air-borne have led to suggestions that they launchedthemselves by jumping from cliffs, by dropping from trees, or even by rising into light winds from the crestsof waves. Each hypothesis has its difficulties. The first wrongly assumes that the pterosaur's hind feetresembled a bat's and could served as hooks by which the animal could bang in preparation for flight. Thesecond hypothesis seems unlikely because large pterosaurs could not have landed in trees withoutdamaging their wings. The birds call for high waves to channels updrafts. The wind that made such waveshowever, might have been too strong for the pterosaurs to control their flight once airborne.According to the passage, the skeleton of a pterosaur can be distinguished from that of a bird by theA. anatomic origin of its wing strutB. Location of the shoulder joint joining the wind to its bodyC. size of its wing spanD. presence of hollow spaces in its bonesE. presence of hook like projections on its hind feetAnswer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2 Which printing trend is the result of the increase in original digital content?
A. Documents are distributed electronically and then printed.B. Fewer documents are being printed.C. Business is not concerned about printing costs.D. Documents are copied on paper and then distributed.Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3 Refer to the Exhibit:After a storage failover, you notice that a NAS LIF, that is linked to the broadcast domain CIFS, is no longer reachable after the takeover. Node cluster1-01 is still waiting for giveback.Referring to the exhibit, what caused the problem?A. Port a0a of node cluster1-01 is down.B. The broadcast-domain MTU needs to be either 1500 or 9000.C. The ports of cluster1-02 are missing in the broadcast domain.D. The LIF has to be configured with a failover group.Answer: B
