NEW QUESTION: 3 A media management layer is always used when recover manager _____. A. Reads or writes to disk files. B. Reads or writes to tapes. C. Performs media recovery. D. Reads or writes through a channel. Answer: B Explanation: A media management layer is always used when recover manager reads or writes to tapes. Incorrect Answers: B: A media management layer (MML) is not used to perform media recovery. C: MML does not read or write to disk files. D: It does not read or write through a channel. Oracle 8, DBA Certification Exam Guide, Jason S Couchman, p. 611 Chapter 13: Using Recovery Manager for Backups

NEW QUESTION: 4 A user has plugged in a wireless router from home with default configurations into a network jack at the office. This is known as: A. an unauthorized entry point. B. a rogue access point. C. an evil twin. D. an IV attack. Answer: B Explanation: A rogue access point is a wireless access point that should not be there. In this question, the wireless router has been connected to the corporate network without authorization. Therefore, it is a rogue access point. A rogue access point is a wireless access point that has either been installed on a secure company network without explicit authorization from a local network administrator, or has been created to allow a hacker to conduct a man-in-the-middle attack. Rogue access points of the first kind can pose a security threat to large organizations with many employees, because anyone with access to the premises can install (maliciously or non-maliciously) an inexpensive wireless router that can potentially allow access to a secure network to unauthorized parties. Rogue access points of the second kind target networks that do not employ mutual authentication (client-server server-client) and may be used in conjunction with a rogue RADIUS server, depending on security configuration of the target network. To prevent the installation of rogue access points, organizations can install wireless intrusion prevention systems to monitor the radio spectrum for unauthorized access points. Incorrect Answers: A. An evil twin, in the context of network security, is a rogue or fake wireless access point (WAP) that appears as a genuine HOTSPOT offered by a legitimate provider. In this question, the wireless access point has its default settings. It is therefore, not trying to imitate the corporate wireless network and is therefore, not an evil twin. B. An initialization vector is a random number used in combination with a secret key as a means to encrypt data. This number is sometimes referred to as a nonce, or "number occurring once," as an encryption program uses it only once per session. An initialization vector is used to avoid repetition during the data encryption process, making it impossible for hackers who use dictionary attack to decrypt the exchanged encrypted message by discovering a pattern. This is known as an IV attack. An unauthorized wireless access point plugged into a network is not an IV attack. Therefore this answer is incorrect. D. If the wireless router was providing access to the corporate network, it could be defined as an unauthorized entry point. However, 'rogue access point' is a more specific term to describe the wireless router in this question. Therefore this answer is incorrect.
