NEW QUESTION: 1Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com. The domain contains a domain controller named DC1. DC1 has the DNS Server server role installed and hosts an Active Directory-integrated zone for contoso.com. The no-refresh interval and the refresh interval are both set to three days. The Advanced DNS settings of DC1 are shown in the Advanced DNS Settings exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)You open the properties of a static record named Server1 as shown in the Server1 Record exhibit.(Click the Exhibit button.)You discover that the scavenging process ran today, but the record for Server1 was not deleted.You run dnscmd.exe and specify the age all records parameter.You need to identify when the record for Server1 will be deleted from the zone.In how many days will the record be deleted?A. 0B. 1C. 2D. 3*Answer: A*Explanation:The blank Record time stamp field indicates a static record. That's the reason it wasn't deleted. The timestamp has been set using dnscmd /ageallrecords. The Time to live setting means that the server will hold a cached record for 10 days, so it has nothing to do with this question. The record will become stale in six days (no-refresh interval + refresh interval, that's 3 + 3 days), so now that the timestamp has been set it will be deleted when the next scavenging operation occurs, in seven days.Reference 1: <http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc772069.aspx> dnscmd /ageallrecords Sets the current time on all time stamps in a zone or node. Record scavenging does not occur unless the records are time stamped. Name server (NS) resource records, start of authority (SOA) resource records, and Windows Internet Name Service (WINS) resource records are not included in the scavenging process, and they are not time stamped even when the ageallrecords command runs.Reference 2: <http://www.windowsitpro.com/article/dns/scavenging-stale-dns-records> When a record is older than the sum of the no-refresh interval and the refresh interval, the scavenging feature considers the record stale and deletes it. So, when you set No-refresh interval to 3 days and Refresh interval to 5 days, scavenging will delete records that are more than 8 days old.

Explanation: <http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/hh994698.aspx>The Wireless LAN service is a feature in Windows Server@ 2012 that you can use to enable the wireless WLAN AutoConfig service, and to configure the WLAN AutoConfig service for automatic startup. Once enabled, the WLAN AutoConfig service dynamically selects which wireless network the computer automatically connects to, and configures the necessary settings on the wireless network adapter. This includes automatically selecting and connecting to a more preferred wireless network when one becomes available. To enable the Wireless LAN Service in Server Manager Dashboard, click Manage, and then click Add Roles and Features. The Add Roles and Features Wizard opens. Click Next. In Select installation type, select Role-based or feature-based installation, and then click Next.
