Answer: A
Explanation: SDN firewalls (e.g, security groups) can apply to assets based on more flexible criteria than hardware-based firewalls, since they aren't limited based on physical topology. (Note that this is true of many types of software firewalls, but is distinct from hardware firewalls). SDN firewalls are typically policy sets that define ingress and egress rules that can apply to single assets or groups of assets, regardless of network location (within a given virtual network).
