NEW QUESTION: 2You are configuring Azure Pipelines for three projects in Azure DevOps as shown in the following table.Which version control system should you recommend for each project? To answer, drag the appropriate version control systems to the correct projects. Each version control system may be used once, more than once, or not at all. You may need to drag the split bar between panes or scroll to view content.NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.Answer: Explanation:ExplanationProject1:Git in Azure ReposProject2: Github Enterprise GitHub Enterprise is the on-premises version of GitHub.com. GitHub Enterprise includes the same great set of features as GitHub.com but packaged for running on your organization's local network. All repository data is stored on machines that you control, and access is integrated with your organization's authentication system (LDAP, SAML, or CAS).Project3: Bitbucket cloud One downside, however, is that Bitbucket does not include support for SVN but this can be easily amended migrating the SVN repos to Git with tools such as SVN Mirror for Bitbucket . Note: SVN is a centralized version control system.

NEW QUESTION: 3Which of the following is a Cisco-proprietary link-bundling protocol?A. PAgP B. HSRPC. LACPD. VRRPAnswer: AExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Section: Enterprise Network Design ExplanationExplanation:Port Aggregation Protocol (PAgP) is a Cisco-proprietary link-bundling protocol. Configuring multiple physical ports into a bundle, which is also known as a port group or an EtherChannel group, enables a switch to use the multiple physical ports as a single connection between a switch and another device.Because bundled links function as a single logical port, Spanning Tree Protocol (STP) is automatically disabled on the physical ports in the bundle? however, spanning tree must be running on the associated port channel virtual interface to prevent bridging loops. Typically, a link bundle is configured for high-bandwidth transmissions between switches and servers. When a link bundle is configured, traffic is load balanced across all links in the port group, which provides fault tolerance. If a link in the port group goes down, that link's traffic load is redistributed across the remaining links. PAgP cannot be used to create an EtherChannel on non-Cisco switches. In addition, PAgP cannot be used to create an EtherChannel link between a Cisco switch and a non-Cisco switch, because the EtherChannel protocol must match on each side of the EtherChannel link. Link Aggregation Control Protocol (LACP) is a link-bundling protocol that is defined in the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) 802.3ad standard, not by Cisco. Because LACP is a standards-based protocol, it can be used between Cisco and non-Cisco switches. Both PAgP and LACP work by dynamically grouping physical interfaces into a single logical link. However, LACP is newer than PAgP and offers somewhat different functionality. Like PAgP, LACP identifies neighboring ports and their group capabilities? however, LACP goes further by assigning roles to the link bundle's endpoints. LACP enables a switch to determine which ports are actively participating in the bundle at any given time and to make operational decisions based on those determinations. Neither Hot Standby Router Protocol (HSRP) nor Virtual Router Redundancy Protocol (VRRP) is a link-bundling protocol. HSRP is a Cisco-proprietary first-hop redundancy protocol (FHRP). VRRP is an Internet Engineering Task Force (IETF) standard FHRP. Both HSRP and VRRP can be used to configure failover in case a primary default gateway goes down.
