NEW QUESTION: 2You currently have an application deployed via Elastic Beanstalk. You are now deploying a new application and have ensured that Elastic beanstalk has detached the current instances and deployed and reattached new instances. But the new instances are still not receiving any sort of traffic. Why is this the case?A. The instances are of the wrong AMI, hence they are not being detected by the ELB.B. It takes time for the ELB to register the instances, hence there is a small timeframe before your instances can start receiving trafficC You need to create a new Elastic Beanstalk application, because you cannot detach and then reattach instances to an ELB within an Elastic Beanstalk applicationC. The instances needed to be reattached before the new application version was deployedAnswer: B*Explanation: Explanation Before the EC2 Instances can start receiving traffic, they will be checked via the health checks of the CLB. Once the health checks are successful, the EC2 Instance will change its state to InService and then the EC2 Instances can start receiving traffic. For more information on ELB health checks, please refer to the below link:*

NEW QUESTION: 3Examine the output of the query that you executed to list the objects in the recycle bin: You verified that no table named SALES_TAB exists in the schema. Then you executed the following command to purge the objects in the recycle bin: SQL> PURGE TABLE sales_tab; What would be the outcome of this command?A. The command returns an error because multiple entries with the same name exist in the recycle binB. All three tables in the recycle bin are purgedC. Only the table with the latest DROP SCN is purgedD. Only the table with the oldest DROP SCN is purgedAnswer: D*Explanation: verified http://download.oracle.com/docs/cd/B14117_01/server.101/b10759/statements_9018.htm If you specify the user-specified name, and if the recycle bin contains more than one object of that name, then the database purges the object that has been in the recycle bin the longest. Use the PURGE statement to remove a table or index from your recycle bin and release all of the space associated with the object, or to remove the entire recycle bin, or to remove part of all of a dropped tablespace from the recycle bin. When the database purges a table, all table partitions, LOBs and LOB partitions, indexes, and other dependent objects of that table are also purged. The database object must reside in your own schema or you must have the DROP ANY... system privilege for the type of object to be purged, or you must have the SYSDBA system privilege.
