NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following attack could be avoided by creating more security awareness in the organization and provide adequate security knowledge to all employees?
A. Phishing B. Interrupt attack C. Traffic analysis D. Smurf attack
Answer: A
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference: Phishing is the attempt to get information such as usernames, passwords, and credit card details commonly through email spoofing and instant messaging that contain links directing the unsuspecting user to enter details at a fake website whose look and feel are almost identical to the legitimate website. Attempts to deal with phishing include legislation, user training, public awareness, and technical security measures.
Incorrect Answers: A: A smurf attack is a distributed denial of service (DDoS) attack in which an ICMP ECHO REQUEST packet with the victim's spoofed source address is sent to the victim's network broadcast address. Each system on the victim's subnet receives an ICMP ECHO REQUEST packet and replies with an ICMP ECHO REPLY packet to the spoof address in the ICMP ECHO REQUEST packet. This floods the victim's system, causing it to slow down, freeze, crash, or reboot.
B: A traffic analysis attack is carried out to uncover information by analyzing traffic patterns on a network. Traffic padding can be used to counter this kind of attack, in which decoy traffic is sent out over the network to disguise patterns and make it more difficult to uncover them.
D: An interrupt or denial of service (DoS) attack occurs when an attacker sends multiple service requests to the victim's computer until they eventually overwhelm the system, causing it to freeze, reboot, and ultimately not be able to carry out regular tasks.
