NEW QUESTION: 1A. 0B. 1C. 2D. 3Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2Which of the following is the core idea of network troubleshooting?A. Top-downB. Determining and analysisC. Service traffic path checkD. Information collection
Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3A Cisco Catalyst switch is experiencing packet drops on a SPAN destination port that is connected to an Cisco IPS appliance. Which three configurations should be considered to resolve the packet drops issue? (Choose three.)A. Configure an additional SPAN session to a different Cisco IPS appliance interface connected to the same virtual sensorB. Configure RSPAN.C. Configure the Cisco IPS appliance to inline mode.D. Configure VACL capture.E. Configure an EtherChannel bundle as the SPAN destination port.Answer: A,C,D Explanation:From Neil: A, D, EA. Adding an additional span session to a different Cisco IPS will remove some of the traffic and load from the existing span - Confirmed Correct B.Cisco documentation clearly defines that Ether-channels cannot be configured as SPAN destination ports. This rules out option B.- Confirmed Incorrect http://www.cisco.com/en/US/docs/switches/lan/catalyst3550/software/release/12.1_19_ea1/c_onfiguration/guide/swspan.html#wp1044603C. RSPAN is remote span which is used to send traffic to a device not connected to the local switch. While this would have a similar effect to answer A since you are in fact creating another span, the implication here is that there is only one IPS device. - Unconfirmed IncorrectD. Configuring VACL capture will allow a reduced amount of traffic and load on the span by selecting and sending only select traffic over the SPAN to the IPS. - Confirmed CorrectE. Configuring the Cisco IPS appliance in inline mode would eliminate the need for a span altogether. -Unconfirmed Correct.Cisco ASA IPS Modules-Inline OperationYou can configure the ASA to only forward specific traffic to the AIP SSM or AIP SSC forinspection. This is achieved by using the Cisco Modular Policy Framework (MPF), where you canconfigure a Cisco ASA to selectively send traffic to the AIP module operating in inline orpromiscuous mode. You can also specify that all traffic be inspected by the AIP module, and if thetotal traffic exceeds the IPS module inspection capacity, you can modify the MPF configuration insuch a way that only critical traffic is inspected.This approach reduces the traffic the IPS module will have to analyze, and it is guaranteed toperform optimally.Cisco

ASA IPS Modules-Promiscuous Operation A selective capture can also be used to ensure that only part of the traffic flowing through a Cisco ASA is sent to the AIP module in promiscuous mode. This way, the AIP module is not overwhelmed and critical data is analyzed. The same concept applies when using the Cisco IPS Advanced Integration Module (AIM): When in inline or promiscuous mode, select traffic can be directed to it. Cisco Catalyst Switches-VACL Capture When an IPS is connected to a Cisco Catalyst switch, you can perform selective capture by setting the appropriate VLAN access control lists (VACL). The VACLs capture only a subset of traffic off the switch backplane and copy it to the sensor that is connected on a capture port, instead of a SPAN port. The sensor in this case only receives a copy of the packets that are suitable for analysis and completely ignores the rest of the traffic. Performance issues and bottlenecks should be avoided by sizing the IPS sensors adequately and ensuring that the network topology design is a good fit.
