NEW QUESTION: 1Based on the provided ASDM configuration for the remote ASA, which one of the following is correct?
A. A route to 192.168.22.0/24 will not be automatically installed in the routing table
B. The ASA will use a window of 128 packets (64x2) to perform the anti-replay check
C. An access-list must be configured on the outside interface to permit inbound VPN traffic
D. The tunnel can also be established on TCP port 10000
Answer: B
Explanation:
Explanation Cisco IP security (IPsec) authentication provides anti-replay protection against an attacker duplicating encrypted packets by assigning a unique sequence number to each encrypted packet. The decryptor keeps track of which packets it has seen on the basis of these numbers. Currently, the default window size is 64 packets. Generally, this number (window size) is sufficient, but there are times when you may want to expand this window size. The IPsec Anti-Replay Window: Expanding and Disabling feature allows you to expand the window size, allowing the decryptor to keep track of more than 64 packets.

NEW QUESTION: 2You r Exchange Server 2007 environment has a single Hub Transport server. A hardware failure occurs on the Hub Transport server . You perform a role recovery to a new computer. You need to view routing information for an e-mail message that was sent prior to the hardware failure. What should you do?
A. Run the Setup /m:RecoverServer command.
B. Run the GetMessageTrackingLogE2EWithTime.ps1 script.
C. Run the Setup /DisasterRecovery command.
D. Restore the message tracking logs from backup.
Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3The 192.168.0.0 network is not being propagated throughout the network. Observe the BGP configuration commands from the advertising router. What is the reason the 192.168.0.0 route is not being advertised?
router bgp 65111 neighbor 172.16.1.1 remote-as 65111 neighbor 172.16.2.1 remote-as 65112 network 192.168.0.0 network 10.0.0.0! ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0
A. The network 10.0.0.0 statement is missing mask 255.0.0.0.
B. The network 192.168.0.0 statement is missing mask 0.0.255.255.
C. The network 10.0.0.0 statement is missing mask 0.255.255.255.
D. The auto-summary configuration is missing.
E. The network 192.168.0.0 statement is missing mask 255.255.0.0
Answer: E
Explanation:
Explanation The "network" statement in other routing protocols (EIGRP, OSPF, RIP...) is used to enable routing protocol on the interfaces within that "network" statement. But in BGP, the function of a network statement is to tell the router to search the IP routing table for a particular network, and if that network is found, originate it into the BGP database. But notice that you must have an exact match in the IP routing table to appear the network in the BGP routing table (in this case we don't see the auto-summary command so we suppose it is disabled in this case). For example: + network 10.10.10.0/8 will appear in BGP if network 10.10.10.0/8 appears in the IP routing table. + network 10.10.10.0/24 will appear in BGP if network 10.10.10.0/24 appears in the IP routing table. Therefore, in this question the static route "ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0" was used to put a route to 192.168.0.0/16 into the routing table (although it points to Null0 but this command really makes that route appear in the routing table). But the "network 192.168.0.0" statement tells the router to lookup network 192.168.0.0/24 (if the network statement under BGP-mode does not specify a subnet mask, the default subnet mask of that class will be used). The router only finds network 192.168.0.0/16 -> The network 192.168.0.0 is not being propagated throughout the network because of the mismatch of the subnet mask. Just for your information, in fact we have to suppose there is no entry of the network 192.168.0.0/24 exist in the routing table except the static route "ip route 192.168.0.0 255.255.0.0 null0". If such an entry exists (for example, a directly connected entry like "C 192.168.0.0/24 is directly connected") then the router still advertises it with the "network 192.168.0.0 (without mask 255.255.0.0) command.

NEW QUESTION: 4 Alarms and notifications are generated by IDSs to inform users when attacks are detected. The most common form of alarm is: A. Email B. Pager C. Onscreen alert D. Icq

Answer: C
Explanation: Alarms and notifications are generated by IDSs to inform users when attacks are detected. Most commercial IDSs allow users a great deal of latitude in determining how and when alarms are generated and to whom they are displayed. The most common form of alarm is an onscreen alert or popup window. This is displayed on the IDS console or on other systems as specified by the user during the configuration of the IDS. The information provided in the alarm message varies widely, ranging from a notification that an intrusion has taken place to extremely detailed messages outlining the IP addresses of the source and target of the attack, the specific attack tool used to gain access, and the outcome of the attack. Another set of options that are of utility to large or distributed organizations are those involving remote notification of alarms or alerts. These allow organizations to configure the IDS so that it sends alerts to cellular phones and pagers carried by incident response teams or system security personnel.
