NEW QUESTION: 2 Which of the following control? MOST efficiently ensures that orders transmitted from a sales office to a production warehouse are received accurately and completely? A. Parity checking should be incorporated into all data transmissions. B. Data should be sent back to the originating site and compared to what was sent to production. C. Transaction totals and record counts should be sent and reconciled before transaction processing. D. Continuity of numerical sequences for all sales orders should be checked. Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3 Network Data Management Protocol (NDMP) technology should be used for backup if: A. a network attached storage (NAS) appliance is required. B. file permissions that can not be handled by legacy backup systems must be backed up. C. the use of TCP/IP must be avoided. D. backup consistency over several related data volumes must be ensured. Answer: A Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: NDMP defines three kind of services: a data service that interfaces with the primary storage to be backed up or restored, a tape service that interfaces with the secondary storage (primarily a tape device), and a translator service performing translations including multiplexing multiple data streams into one data stream and vice versa. NDMP services interact with each other. The result of this interaction is the establishment of an NDMP control session if the session is being used to achieve control for the backup or restore operation. It would result in an NDMP data session if the session is being used to transfer actual file system or volume data (including metadata). Control sessions are always TCP/IP-based, but data streams can be TCP/IP- or SAN-based. NDMP is more or less NAS-centric and defines a way to back up and restore data from a device, such as a NAS appliance, on which it is difficult to install a backup software agent, in the absence of NDMP, this data must be backed up as a shared drive on the LAN, which is accessed via network file protocols, such as Common Internet File System (CIFS) or Network File System (NFS), degrading backup performance. NDMP works on a block level for transferring payload data (file content) but metadata and traditional file system information needs to be handled by legacy backup systems that initiate NDMP data movement. NDMP does not know about nor takes care of consistency issues regarding related volumes (e.g., a volume to store data

Server1とServer2という名前の2つのAzureSQLデータベースサーバーがあります。各サーバーには、Database1という名前のAzureSQLデータベースが含まれています。

Database1をServer1からServer2に復元する必要があります。ソリューションは、Server2上の既存のDatabase1を置き換える必要があります。解決策：RESTORE

Transact-SQLコマンドとREPLACEオプションを使用して、Database1をServer1からServer2に復元します。これは目標を達成していますか？A. いいえ B. はい Answer: B Explanation: The REPLACE option overrides several important safety checks that restore normally performs. The overridden checks are as follows: * Restoring over an existing database with a backup taken of another database. With the REPLACE option, restore allows you to overwrite an existing database with whatever database is in the backup set, even if the specified database name differs from the database name recorded in the backup set. This can result in accidentally overwriting a database by a different database. Reference:
