NEW QUESTION: 4What does a router do if it has no EIGRP feasible successor route to a destination network and the successor route to that destination network is in active status?A. It sends a copy of its neighbor table to all adjacent routers.B. It routes all traffic that is addressed to the destination network to the interface indicated in the routing table.C. It broadcasts Hello packets to all routers in the network to re-establish neighbor adjacencies.D. It sends a multicast query packet to all adjacent neighbors requesting available routing paths to the destination network.Answer: D*Explanation:Introduction to EIGRPFfeasible SuccessorsA destination entry is moved from the topology table to the routing table when there is a feasible successor. All minimum cost paths to the destination form a set.From this set, the neighbors that have an advertised metric less than the current routing table metric are considered feasible successors.Feasible successors are viewed by a router as neighbors that are downstream with respect to the destination.These neighbors and the associated metrics are placed in the forwarding table.When a neighbor changes the metric it has been advertising or a topology change occurs in the network, the set of feasible successors may have to be re-evaluated. However, this is not categorized as a route recomputation.Route StatesA topology table entry for a destination can have one of two states. A route is considered in the Passive state when a router is not performing a route recomputation.The route is in Active state when a router is undergoing a route recomputation. If there are always feasible successors, a route never has to go into Active state and avoids a route recomputation.When there are no feasible successors, a route goes into Active state and a route recomputation occurs. A route recomputation commences with a router sending a query packet to all neighbors.Neighboring routers can either reply if they have feasible successors for the destination or optionally return a query indicating that they are performing a route recomputation. While in Active state, a router cannot change the next-hop neighbor it is using to forward packets. Once all replies are received for a given query, the destination can transition to Passive state and a new successor can be selected. When a link to a neighbor that is the only feasible successor goes down, all routes through that neighbor commence a route recomputation and enter the Active state.
