Idempotency resolves the duplicate issues. Design your applications to be idempotent (they should not be affected adversely when processing the same message more than once).

NEW QUESTION: 2A. Option B. Option C. Option D. Option A Answer: A Explanation: By enabling sticky port security, you can configure an interface to convert the dynamic MAC addresses to sticky secure MAC addresses and to add them to the running configuration. You might want to do this if you do not expect the user to move to another port, and you want to avoid statically configuring a MAC address on every port. To enable sticky port security, enter the switchport port-security mac-address sticky command. When you enter this command, the interface converts all the dynamic secure MAC addresses, including those that were dynamically learned before sticky learning was enabled, to sticky secure MAC addresses. The sticky secure MAC addresses do not automatically become part of the configuration file, which is the startup configuration used each time the switch restarts. If you save the running config file to the configuration file, the interface does not need to relearn these addresses when the switch restarts. If you do not save the configuration, they are lost.
